Yours, very truly,

TREAT ALL ALIKE. Senator Van Wyck on Discriminations in Pension

In the Senate, on the 14th inst., in the course of a debate on the bill to pension Mary P. McBlair, daughter of Thomas Parkin McBlair, late a pursince attaining her sixteenth year, when the pension allowed her during infancy expired by

The Senator from New Hampshire says there have fealt that we should stop in the committeeroom hearing special cases and bring in some general law which could reach everybody, the woman in Washington, the woman in New Hampshire, or the woman on the prairies of Nebraska. But it has not been so, as we know, and most of the special cases of the kind which are provided for are those which reach and come up to us from Wash ington, where great social and political influences surround them so that they can be heard. And I would say to my friend from New Hampshire that when we can pause long enough in the Committee on Pensions to frame some general law, the trage-dies to which he referred so eloquently a few days ago, the tragedies as he called them in the Pension Department, will not agitate us. That is what I

One thing is remarkable—and I have a right to allude to that—that in the various cases which come before the committee in great numbers from the city of Washington, the wives of rear-admirals and the wives of commodores, and the wives of major-generals are able to secure prompt attention. We find that sometimes in one year from the time the sod covers the dead body of a rear-acimiral or a commodore or a major-general, or in less than a year, the application of the widow will go into and come out of the Pension Office, Why? Your widow in New Hampshire eannot enter the Pension Office and get out in a year; your widow in Tennessee cannot enter the Pension Office and get out of it in one year. It is time that thing stopped and when we can have some general law we shall be able to stop it.

I thank the Senator from Tennessee for deelaring the doctrine upon which pensions should be granted, and I say to him that I trust the Committee on Pensions will soon present a bill that will increase the pensions of widows from $8 to at least $12 per month, and then I trust that no one will stand up to oppose that, because I can say, in the language of the Senator from Tennessec, if you give a pen-sion to those who are needy, necessitous, and poor, then give them enough to take them out of their unfortunate and impoverished condition. If $15 be not enough for this woman single, will anybody in this chamber rise and teil me that $8 a month is enough for the widow who is left with a family of children to rear, and whose husband perished on the battlefield, and whose resting place is marked only by the board that records the burial of an "unknown soldier?" Senator from Tennessee for that, and I trust the time will come when not only to this woman, to the commodore's widow, and the rear-admiral's be extended, and on the same basis that you apply to those who are specially provided for, carefully looked up and nursed by all the peculiar influences which surround everything that comes before any committee of this body from the capital of the Na-
